Investing in CFDs involves a high degree of risk that you will lose your money due to the use of leverage, particularly in fast-moving markets, where a relatively small movement in the price can lead to a proportionately larger movement in the value of your investment. This can result in losses that exceed the funds in your account. You should consider whether you understand how CFDs work, and you should seek independent advice if necessary.

VPFX may publish general market commentary from time to time. Where it does, the material published does not constitute advice, or a solicitation, or a recommendation for a transaction in any financial instrument.
